Lives and works in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

The painting of Flávia Metzler speaks continuously of a seamless barrier, born underground, from the scruples with which the protagonists and the environment of these screens is displayed. This is the wall of the narrative. Something is going on there - borders on the obvious. And this contradiction, the mismatch between what visually clear and legibly obscure elapses the viewer's state of uncertainty. He is forced to stand in a state of negativity, uncertainty, ie, if the picture opens a fissure in their inner meaning, does not grant the authority meekly to the viewer to decipher it or lend it a univocal logic.
